- Dectron unit (heating & ventilation control for the pool and pool air) is at the end of its functional life
- Upgrades to plumbing infrastructure and improvements to flow
- Durability of existing finishes is an issue in the changerooms
- Cleanability of existing finishes is an issue in the changerooms
- Existing changerooms are not inclusive:
 - limited accessibility options
 - they require the user to be able to identify as one of three choices – male, female or family

Societally, we have recognized that not everyone identifies as male or female.

We also recognize that safety is an important consideration when it comes to washroom and changeroom design.

Good design involves looking ahead and designing spaces that will work now, but will also work for the next 25-50 years.

For these reasons, the majority of public washrooms and changerooms are now being designed as inclusive.

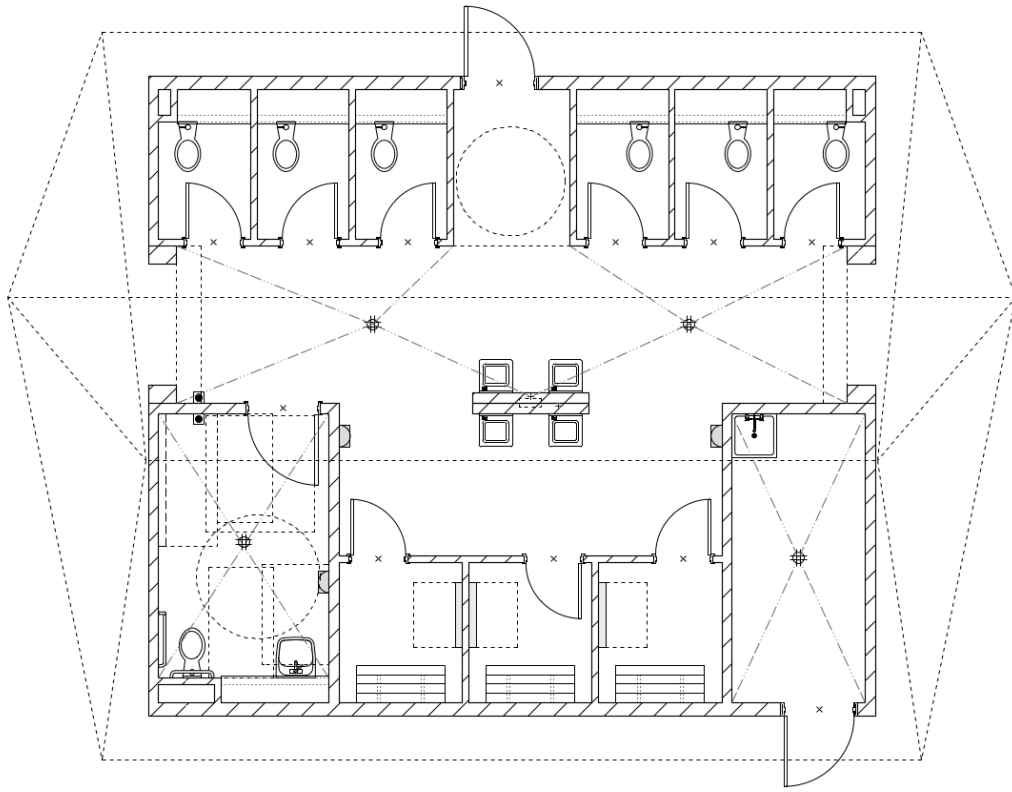

The guiding concept of inclusive design is that the focus should be on the function of a room and not who is allowed to use it

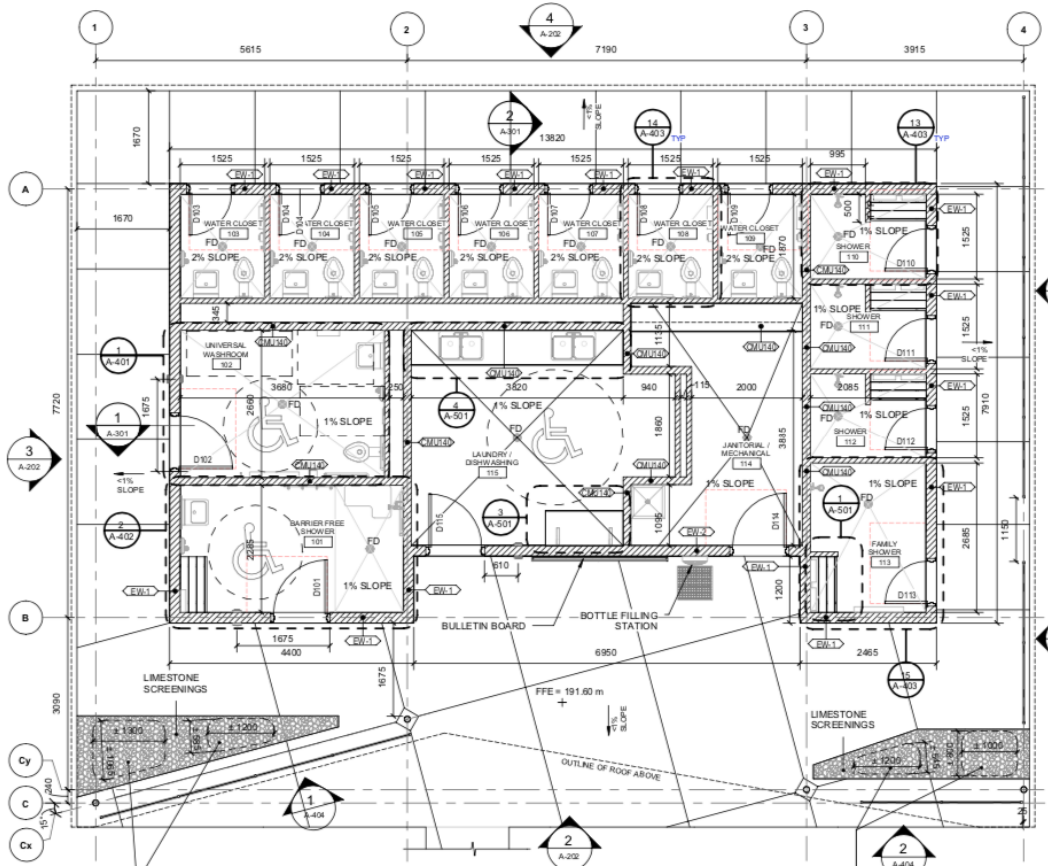

It is also important to ensure that people understand what amenities exist in the room

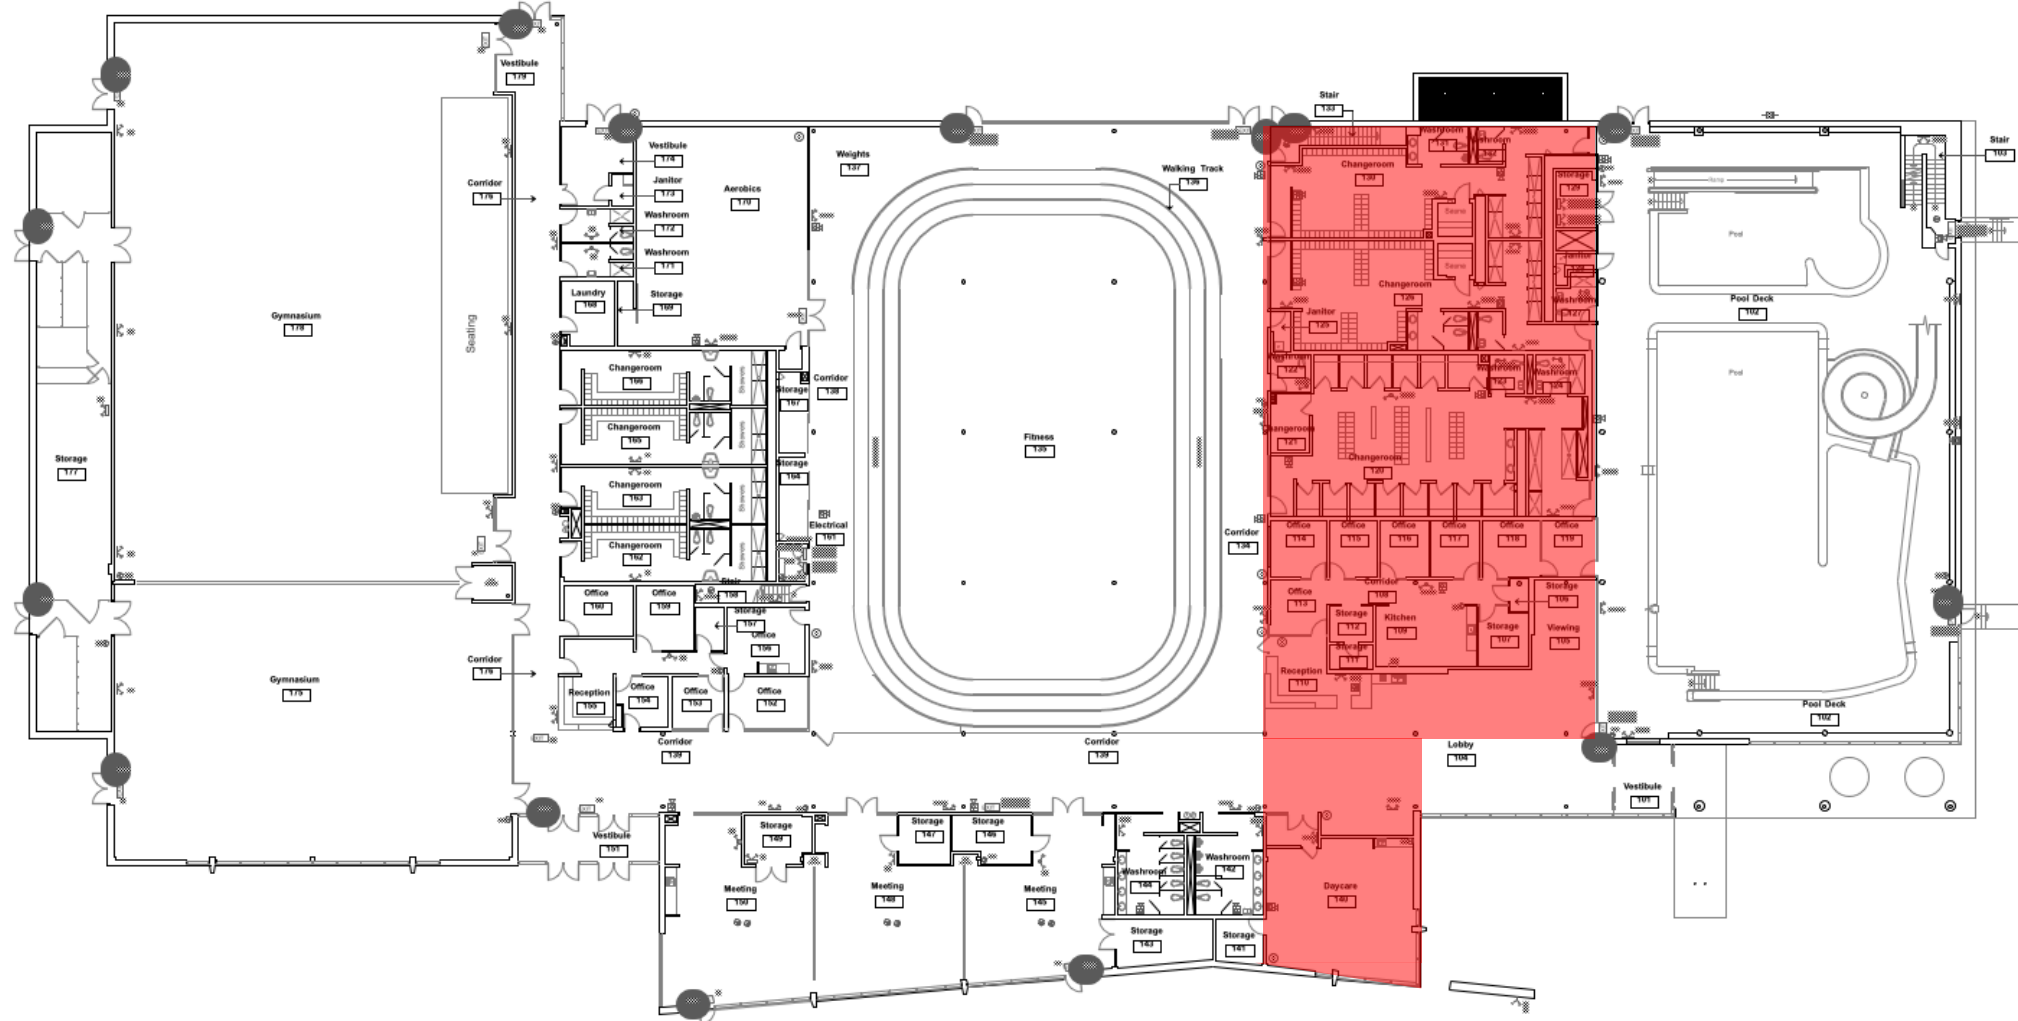

The City of Peterborough has an inclusive washroom pavilion in Nicholls Oval park, containing gender-neutral washrooms and changerooms.

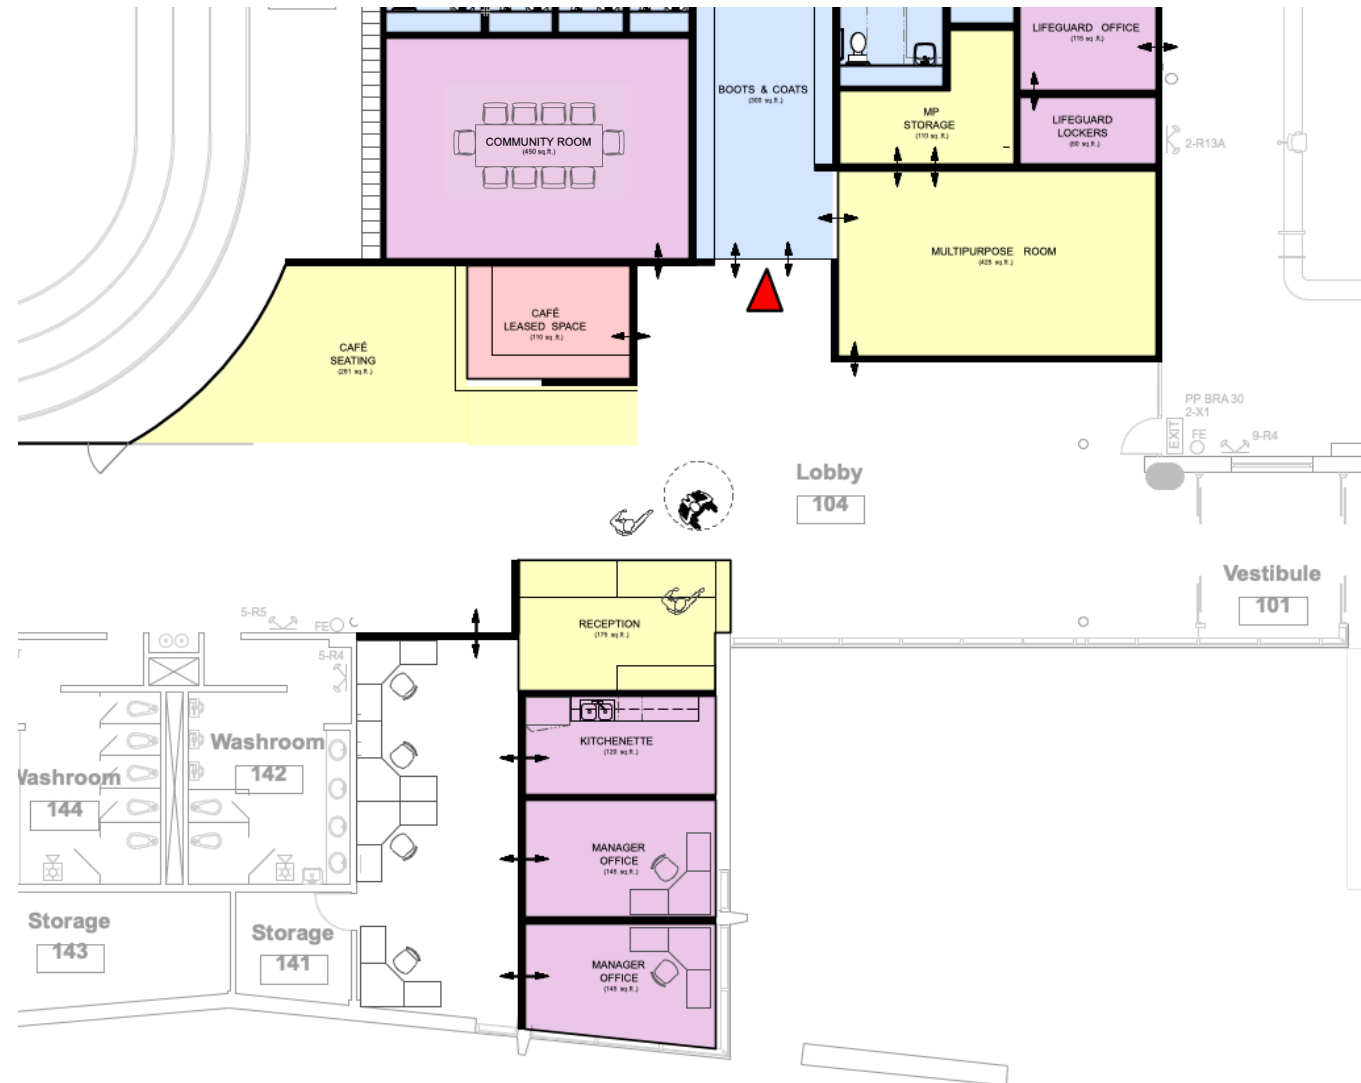

And a new inclusive comfort station at Beavermead Campground that includes gender-neutral washrooms and showers.

The renovation at PSWC focuses on this area in the middle of the building.

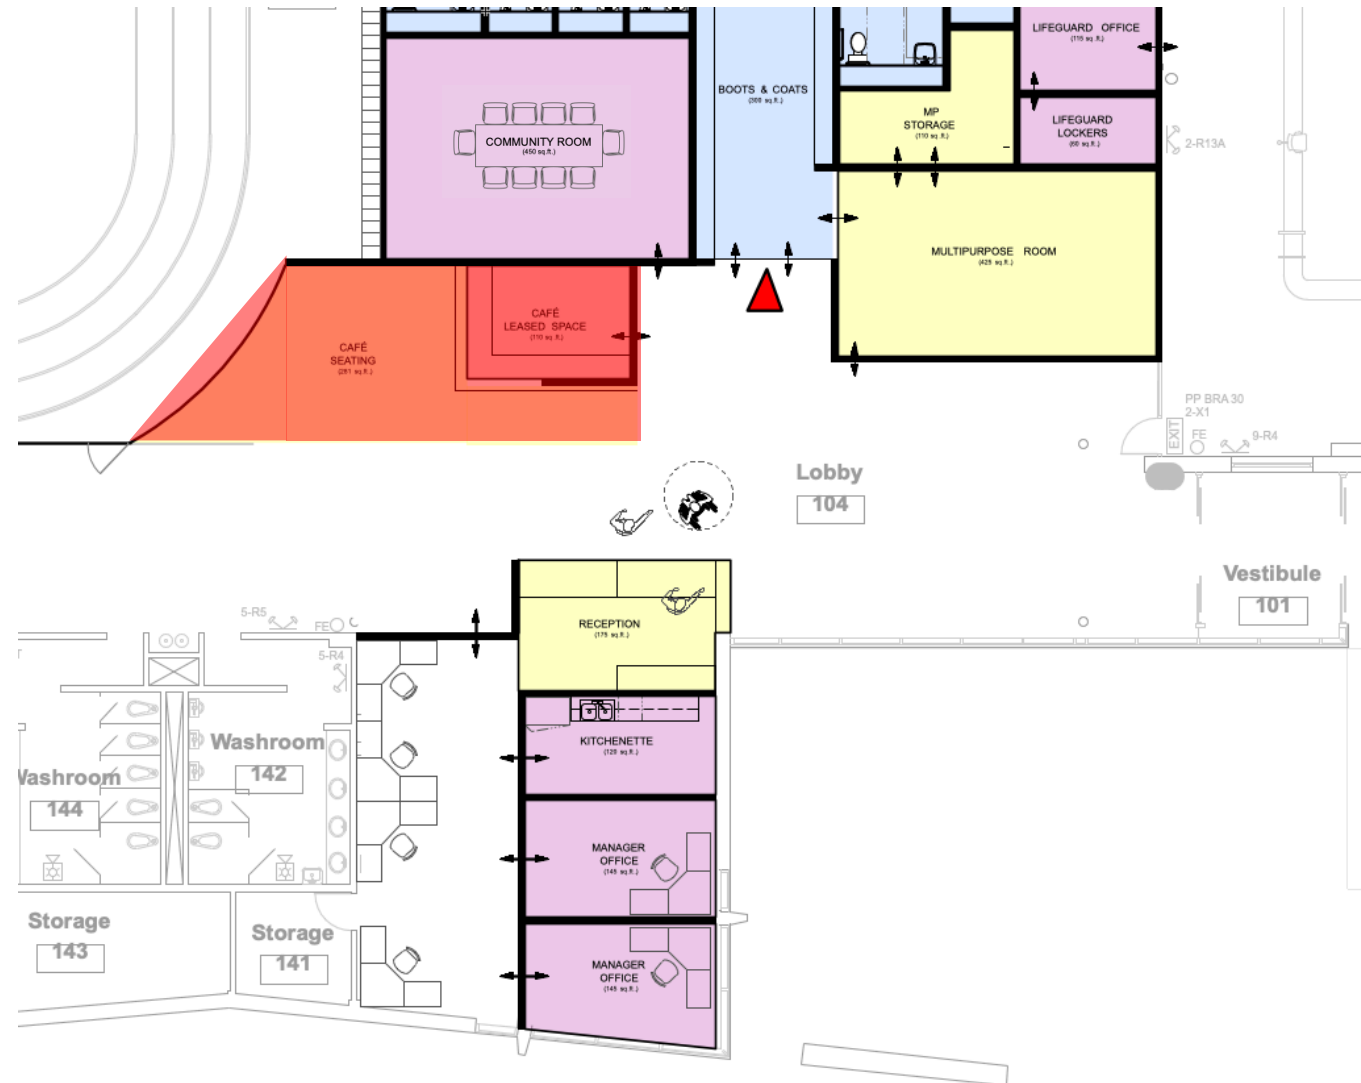

The renovation includes changes to the lobby and office area
